MONDAY....... SEPTEMBER 17 Progress and Improvement of Journalism in Cincinnati-The growth and progress of Cincinnati have been steady and substantial, though less rapid than formerly, in the last ten years; giving promise of the future rather than assurance of the present. In every department of science, education and art has she shown marked improvements; but in nothing has she so materially advanced as in the character of her press, by which we chiefly mean the daily papers of the city. Seven or eight years ago, we were doubtless behind many simflar cities in the enterprise, tact and talent requisite for journalism; but now, we think, we can not only compete with, but surpass, most of the newspapers published in the Atlantic cities-New York. of course, excepted-in the particulars we have mentioned. Every month we are advancing, while the press of most other cities stands still, and has done so for years.

The papers that had an extended reputation years ago, such as the National Intelligencer, Baltimore Patriot, and New Orleans Crescent, for instance, long since reached their climacteric, and are now left so far behind in the race, that no one pauses to ask where they are. They are buried in their own stability, if we may say so; they have ceased to interest the people of this time, because they are associated with, and appealing to, a past.

The leading newspapers of Boston, Philadelphia, Baltimore and New Orleans, though now and then a convulsive effort is made to push some one of them up to the time and into the light, are really no better than they were a decade since; while those of Cincinnati, it must be admitted, have become entirely revolutionized in almost every particular. The journalist who would enter an office to-day, and seek to do as he would have done then, should be regarded as an animated occupant of the tombs of the Ptolemies, or a galvanized corpse from the battle-plains of Phillippi.

The press of Cincinnati is making as rapid strides in the West as that of New York is in the East. You find our dailies all the way from here to Kansas; to Lake Superior and the Gulf of Mexico; they occupy the place of the minor dailies of the various towns and cities of the other contiguous States, and actually strangle the soporific weeklies published for the sole purpose of keeping themselves dead and their proprie-

A degree of liberality and enterprise is shown in the conduct of the papers here, to which many in the older cities of the East are strangers, and likely to remain so. The number of writers and attaches in different capacities here is often greater than it is there, and the amount of money expended in various ways greater than with our Eastern brethern.

The fact is, Cincinnati is the newspaperial focus of the West and South, and must in future increase in the power and excellence of its journals-very far, as yet, we confess, from what they should be-and extend their influence to more remote regions than they yet have reached.

The growth of the past ten years proves what the advancement of the next ten will become, and it requires no prophet to declare that ere long we shall have but one competitor for journalistic prosperity, and that in the acknowledged commercial metropolis

Public Funerals Obnoxionances of the

It is a little singular how men are bound and riveted by customs, absurd though they be; how, like a huge flock of sheep, they follow any leader, even if it be into a ditch or a mill-pond. Half the habits of our lives are opposed to reason. We condemn them in secret; our private judgment repels them; and yet we implicitly go where "It is usual" leads. To custom we sacrifice our goodsense and our feelings even; it is the cruel Juggernaut before which we cast ourselves to be crushed to death.

One thing of this kind that has particularly struck us, is our chabit of burial-the holding of public funerals, than which no more admirable system of lacerating the sensibilities, and placing anew the heart upon the rack, could be conveniently devised.

Our friend or relative dies. Philosophy teaches and religion preaches, but it is all in vain. He or she is dead to us, and so far as this life goes, and we can have no clear conception of another-dead forever. Grief is sacred; we would not have it profuned by the vulgar eye. We would reveal it only to those who sympathize, who have suffered as

Hours pass-long, dreary, painful hoursthat are graven on the mind for all time. We are alone with the dear departed and ourselves. Life flows backward; the pages of existence are returned. We are now fitted for the adversity; but let silence henceforth conceal the scar that calamity has made. We are willing to go forth, and resume the dismal struggle of existence; but, as Goethe said on a similar occasion: "Speak no more of that dark event."

Alas, that we can not do this! Custom demands we must be crucified again: once more our heart must bleed. We must stand in a public assembly; see the uncovered dead; hear the mumbled stereotyped prayer-the platitudinal consolations from professional lips, and behold the curious gaze of the idlers and the gossiping, who have come with the laudable purpose of observing "how the affair goes off!"

Out upon such barbarity: it is unworthy of the heart, unworthy of the age! The rule may be safely laid down: they who attend funerals are either sincere mourners whom the occasion newly pains, or they are the curious who have no reason to be there, but who agonize the bereaved with their cold and calculating air.

No marvel Werther-much as many sneer at his sentimentalism-desired to be buried alone at midnight, unattended by a priest. Who would not prefer this to the glaring drawing-room, the gaping crowd, the heartless sotis-suce jest, the wordiness of a paid-

Tis the best proof that the many worthy gentlemen who are buried are really dead; else they would rise in indignation at the solemn farce called by satirioal courtesy, a

NEW YORK, Soptember 16.—The Breckinridge State Committee publish an address to-morrow, giving their statement of the recent negotiations with the Douglas Committee. They say "our candidates will be supported by all the energy and means at our command. The Douglas organization, in rejecting the only means by which the State could be prevented from voting for Lincoln, has reduced the practical question between the Democrats of New York in the coming election to one of future organization, only by voting for Breckintidge and Lane.

"The National Democrats will not only sattain the principles of their party and preserve tain the principles of their party and preserve a nucleus, about which will be formed a naa nucleus, about which will be formed a national party in the State, but will encourage their friends all over the Union—be received and honored in the next National Convention of Democrats, instead of being neglected and despised, as they surely will be if they present themselves upon the platform of Squatter Sovereignty, in company with their new allies." They charge the Donglass managers in the State will naving produced the present difficulties in the party, and with persistently refusing to allow their adjustment, and say that Squatter Sovereignty is but another form of Republicanism, and conclude by recommending the tormation of campaign clubs and active measures for bringing our whole vote to the polls in November.

Philadelphia. September 15.—Concert

PHILADELPHIA, September 15.—Concert Hall was comfortably filled this evening by the Douglas Democracy. Hon. A. Knesss presided. Gov. Johnson was very enthusiastically received. After expressing his thanks for his warm reception, he entered into a line of argument, similar to that which characterized his speech at the Douglas barbecue morning, inviting all Democrats to attend this meeting, in order to present the Indorse-ment, of what is called the "Bogus Forney Mongrel Electoral Ticket," but no disturbance took place.

Gen. Föster, the Democratic candidate for Governor, will speak in Independence-square on Monday evening, and as this will be the first campaign speech of importance, and he may be called upon to define his position

State during the week. He will commence at Lancaster on Monday next, and close at Pittsburg on Saturday evening.

The person who was employed to watch him was a lawyer, who was also instructed to secure remittances of heavy outstanding balances. Alvear promised a bill of exchange for $100,000 on a certain day, in two hills, each for one-half the amount, payable to himself, under the impression that the filling up might escape the notice of the lawyer, which not being the case, he indorsed the bills in blank, and the originals were put under cover and scaled up.

A few moments of interesting conversation followed, and when departing he took with him the letters lying before him, to be gent forward the same day, but instead of advice and exchange at Madrid, the £10,000 were missing.

They telegraphed to London, and found by reply that the bill had arrived, and had been negotiated to the credit of the purchasers in Havana. Whether this will make a loss to Messrs. Cahuzae Brothers we are not advised. The transaction, as far as this banking-house was concerned, was a proper business transaction, and those selling the exchange were in good reputation in this community at the time.

An Adreoir Hussand and a Credutous Wife,—The St. Paul (Minn.) Pioneer tells of a gentleman who was whitling his buxom partner through the figures of the dance, a few nights ago, at a Tentonic ball, when a friend whispered to him that his wife was at the door inquiring for him. He handed his lady to a seat, escaped through the back door, and ran home. When his wife returned she found her truant lord seated at the table, in dressing-gown and slippers, demurely perusing the pages of the prayer-book! His wife (dear little innocent) was satisfied that she had been misinformed of his whereabouts.
